Dear [redacted]

Request your assistance in obtaining a speaker to address our National Security class at Morehead State University during the fall semester of school year 1979-80.

The National Security Program at Morehead State University is an elective course in the establishment and maintenance of national security. The course is open to anyone in the student body who desires to gain a greater understanding of America's security system and individual responsibilities regarding national security without enrolling in our military science class. Students from all disciplines and academic ranks are permitted to enroll in the course. We also permit nonregistered students and staff and faculty members to attend the various presentations on a selective basis. The program is offered for a nine-week period each fall semester, with two class meetings each week.

Some specific topics covered in the past are "National Resources and International Dependence," "International Implications of Sino-Soviet Relations," "Balance of Power in the Middle East," and "Impact of the Third World on National Security." The lecturers have represented areas from off campus and from the faculty of Morehead State University. Among the more noteworthy off-campus speakers were Dr. Frank Trager, Director of National Security Programs, New York University; Mr. Emanuel Rosen, Principal Assistant to the Deputy Secretary of Defense for Management Systems; Mr. Richard C. Barkley, Special Assistant to Ambassador-at-Large Elsworth Bunker, U.S. Department of State; Major General James H. Ahmann, Director of Plans, Headquarters U.S. Air Force; and Brigadier General James M. Wroth, Commander, U.S. Army Second ROTC Region.

In a nutshell, the overall objective of the National Security course is to create an awareness in young men and women that they need in order to make the appropriate decisions in a democratic society; it provides a body of organized knowledge relating to the crucial problems of national security faced by our citizens.

The topic we have in mind for this year is "The CIA and National Security." The topic is purposely broad to allow your office or the speaker to concentrate on whatever aspect of the CIA you feel appropriate at this time. It is scheduled for presentation at 10:20 a.m. on Thursday, October 11, 1979. The class would provide time for a 50-minute presentation to include a question-and-answer period. We would also like for the speaker to make a short presentation--approximately 20 minutes--at a luncheon which will be attended by students, faculty and staff of the University.

We sincerely feel that a lack of understanding of national security problems is of paramount concern, and one of the best places to address that concern is in the academic community. This should be an excellent opportunity to place the CIA in proper perspective in the national security picture.

I am thankful for any assistance that you may provide in obtaining a speaker. Either myself, Major Jones, or Major Baldwin can be reached at the following telephone numbers: A/C 606 783-5290; 3251; 2291.

Sincerely,

WILLIAM H. MCGEE
